NORTH SCRANTON

LETTER FROM KING EDWARD'S PRIVATE SECRETARY.

Was Received by Miss Caroline Silkman Thanking Her for Her Proffer of a Copy of a Paper Containing an Account of the Coronation of His Mother, the Late Queen Victoria.

Match Games of Hand Ball to Be Played on Saturday—Other News Notes and Personal Mention.

Miss Caroline Silkman, of North Main avenue, on Tuesday received a letter from Sir Francis Knollys, private secretary to King Edward of England, Monday, in which his majesty returns thanks to Miss Silkman for valuable information concerning the coronation of his mother, Queen Victoria.

Miss Silkman is the owner of a copy of the New York Spectator, which published the first account in this country of the coronation of Queen Victoria. This paper, which was printed in 1838 and has now gone out of existence, contained a very interesting and lengthy article on the coronation of the young queen. Mr. Silkman, father of Miss Silkman, preserved the paper and upon his death some twenty-five years ago it became the property of his daughter, Miss Caroline Silkman.

Several weeks ago the New York Times learned of the existence of this paper and the editor requested Miss Silkman to give him a copy of the article, which she did. It was printed on May 11 and was about three columns in length.

Soon after the publication of this article Miss Silkman wrote to Sir F. Knollys, tendering him the original paper and the paper requested Miss Silkman to give him a copy of the article, which she did. It was printed on May 11 and was about three columns in length.

Dear Madam, I am very glad to hear of your interest in the coronation of Queen Victoria. I have been very glad to hear of your interest in the coronation of Queen Victoria. I have been very glad to hear of your interest in the coronation of Queen Victoria.

It will be seen both from my purpose and my utterances that I attempted to lift our minds from the narrow and should not prejudice the present situation but which would throw light upon it from all sources. It was therefore impossible for me to place all the blame of the present miners' strike upon the miners, inasmuch as I did not raise the question of blame in the present strike did not attempt to discuss it, and I speak freely, because I believe Mr. Payne's total failure to apprehend the breadth of my discussion. No one has ever heard me, either in public or private, and I speak freely, because I believe Mr. Payne's total failure to apprehend the breadth of my discussion.

Dear Madam, I am very glad to hear of your interest in the coronation of Queen Victoria. I have been very glad to hear of your interest in the coronation of Queen Victoria. I have been very glad to hear of your interest in the coronation of Queen Victoria.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE.

[Under this heading short letters of interest will be published when accompanied, for publication, by the writer, and he assumes no responsibility for opinions here expressed.]

Rev. Dr. Lansing Replies to Rev. Mr. Payne.

Editor of The Tribune.

Sir: In endeavoring to clear the minds of the people from misunderstandings, and to take up some of the points which are misunderstood, indeed the capacity for misunderstanding is very large. However, we must take the risk if we are to any degree to discuss the practical or even the theoretical side of the question. I would not have supposed that Mr. Payne could have so misconstrued my discourse on strikes, unless I had had experience in the difficulty of making some men understand what you try to state in the clearest terms. And now it is my purpose to avoid the same mistake and to speak more fully of Mr. Payne's statements, not that I mean to attack him in any way, but only that I may possibly help to a better understanding of the subject which, misunderstood, is working so much harm to all the interests of our country.

The present miners' strike was not the only strike which I had in my mind nor of which I speak in my address. On the contrary, I stated that the last twenty years had been the strike period of this country, giving the number during that time of our previous history as 148, and citing the number for the last twenty years as 273. To this I added some figures of strikes in Massachusetts at various periods, as well as others which I did not attempt to discuss. The general survey of the whole subject which I proposed and which I carried out as far as I was able is contained in the address which I attempted to discuss the present strike in this valley, save only as, by allusion, it might be classed as one of many. The advantages and disadvantages of strikes were presented from the world-wide survey of the subject.

It will be seen both from my purpose and my utterances that I attempted to lift our minds from the narrow and should not prejudice the present situation but which would throw light upon it from all sources. It was therefore impossible for me to place all the blame of the present miners' strike upon the miners, inasmuch as I did not raise the question of blame in the present strike did not attempt to discuss it, and I speak freely, because I believe Mr. Payne's total failure to apprehend the breadth of my discussion.
